Why Join VACE?

For the past 50 years, the Virginia Association of Colleges and Employers (VACE) has played a valuable role in the connections, communications, and networking between employers who hire college students and alumni, the career services staff who serve those students, and the associate members who serve the profession.

VACE membership provides a collaborative community with resources and opportunities to help you meet your career goals and your organization's initiatives.

Professional Development:

Throughout the year, VACE offers its members opportunities for professional development through activities such as site visits, roundtables, workshops, and other in-service training experiences. The interaction among college and employer members allows for self-improvement and learning.

VACE Listserv: Members have an account on the organization listserv in order to receive communication and send communication to other members regarding events taking place in their areas in which others may be invited to attend, advertise job opportunities and serve as a forum to share pertinent information.

Annual Conference: Held each spring, the annual conference provides an opportunity to share timely information and focus on important issues. Noteworthy speakers address major developments in the field, group discussions focus on key areas of program development, and social gatherings provide ample time for members to exchange ideas with new and old colleagues alike. You can also earn HR re-certification credits by presenting a session at the conference.

Committee Participation: A number of committees, including the Annual Conference, Awards, Membership & Marketing, and Technology committees, offer numerous opportunities for member involvement and leadership development.
